FOREWORD BY JOEL LANG, M.D.

In the past few years, the clamor for sexual freedom has snowballed into gigantic proportions. Since the Danes scrapped such words as pornography and obscenity, the rest of the world (Christian, that is) has been forced to open their Victorian eyes and ears and admit to the fact that males are equipped with cocks and balls, the cock gets a hard-on and ejaculates sperm (i.e., come) and gives the possessor a feeling of intense pleasure; the female is gifted with a vulva, a clitoris and a vagina, also instruments capable of offering extreme gratification. Any combination of these diverse organs is again the source of keenest delight. To digress, only one of these organs is necessary to obtain the same results (i.e., masturbation).

The female child matures earlier sexually than the male but both genders are almost invariably knowledgeable as to their sex organs and the fact that aside from their functions of elimination, they are also the source of strange, wonderful feelings. The Victorian attitude toward pre-teen sex knowledge and manipulation was one of horror and nightmare. Until a few years ago, masturbation was taught to be the cause of everything from softening of the brain to acne and pimples.

Nevertheless, masturbation is a built-in release valve and most youngsters, although as secretly as possible, indulged in the terrible practice, preferring to tempt fate rather than give up their infallible source of perfect, though fleeting, self gratification. These taboo rules have luckily been softened through enlightened young, modern parents who finally have been taught the truth.

A young male might start masturbatory practices from the infant stage by merely discovering the pleasurable titilation of friction on his miniature penis. Once having experienced this delightful pastime, the habit is hard to break, or I should say curb. Other youngsters are taught or shown how by an older boy or one of their peers who is more sexually precocious than they.

Ejaculation is not necessary to orgasm which is what pre-puberty lads experience when they "tickle". The same intense feelings are present and orgasmic paralysis occurs as in mature males after ejaculation. The age of puberty (after the boy first ejaculates) might begin prematurely, say as early as ten, but most boys deliver their first load of semen at twelve or thirteen, just as pubic hair is ready to sprout. During this first wild, sexual turning point, most boys tend to overdo and there are many documented records of five and six orgasms a day, every day, by these sexually precocious tadpoles. When one young lad was interviewed, he said that he had learned that excessive jacking-off was detrimental so he cut down from twelve to only five times a day. He didn't want to take any chances!

Some of these lads become absolutely sexually mature at this time and seek out mature partners. There are literally hundreds of thousands of mature males who lean toward inversion and upon being offered the use of the under-age body with its youth, volatility and bubbling effervescence, have no other recourse than to acquiesce. I am using the adult male because most boys are in sexual contact with other males long before they touch a female.

The boys who learn to prefer males are naturally flattered by an adult's attention and upon experiencing sex with a mature body with its full complement of hair and full blown organs, finds more satisfaction than with his buddies. These young males become predatory if they have occasion to be paid for their sexual favors and there we have the budding male hustler.

The law, of course, has refused to believe that an under-age person is capable of sexual decisions (at twenty-one, a boy supposedly understands everything over night; a girl at eighteen) so therefore, anytime an adult is found in a compromising situation with a boy less than twenty-one or a girl less than eighteen, he is totally at fault and is charged with statutory rape or contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

This is not quite fair because the male of the species is more easily aroused sexually and is usually easy prey to those precocious youngsters who know exactly what they possess and what they want. Again, I am speaking of males, although we have the Lolitas on the other side of the coin who use their premature sensuality for material gain as well as satisfaction.

What inverted adult male could mentally refuse an obvious invitation from a young, handsome lad displaying a youthful, firm body and more than likely, a set of well turned buttocks and a lengthy bulge in his groin? These young studs learn how to dress and act to appear sexier and more exciting, casting an air of innocence and nonchalance over a deeply sensual inner self.

The unfortunate adult who is apprehended with the teen-ager is considered a sex maniac, a destroyer of youthful morals and a general pervert and satanist. There are thousands of cases of the adult never having been in a sexual situation with another man before, but couldn't turn down the offer of a sharp-eyed, steely minded, under-age hustler whose physical attributes could not be denied. These men are often good husbands, fathers, so called pillars of the community and even priests and teachers. In every walk of life, you can find latently homosexual men, almost totally unaware of standing on the brink of a sexual precipice and one good push from an irresistible, highly sexed youngster can send him tumbling into an inescapable abyss.

We have laws which take an eighteen-year-old lad and stand him on the firing line. He can fight and die but he can't drink or vote in most states; he can't go into a night club or any other "Adults Only" place and he is also legally sexually under-age. He is expected to give his life but he still can't lawfully perform the sex act unless he's married. And heaven forbid if he gets caught in a sexual liaison with another male while in the service! Disgrace, discharge, fine and imprisonment face him and the result of this follows him all of his life. Tell me what is so wrong about the healthy release of sexual tensions between two bodies of sound mind and mature sexual equipment. Naturally, I don't condone seduction of children or the contribution to the destruction of another's morals or ideals, but in the case of sexual congress with an enlightened youngster, I think the legal blame should be shared.

In many areas of the world, recognition is given to nubility at an early age and sex is sanctioned when the body is prepared for it. Even in our own country in the South and other areas, youngsters were married as early as fourteen and fifteen. In India, Africa and the Orient, child-brides have long been in fashion.

Sexual prudery is being denigrated in today's society and no one knows how far the doors to total sexual freedom will swing open. Sex is becoming more of a parlor game now instead of a closed bedroom door affair. The new Women's Liberation advancements extol the right for a woman to choose her own partner under her own terms without castigation from the State, the Church, or society. In the light of this far reaching revolution, all sex laws will have to change or be abandoned to recede into oblivion. By the same token, sexuality in children should not be overlooked or frowned upon. With truthful education, there will be fewer sex crimes and happier, more understanding relationships for everyone.
